

Going Green

"We offer an array of environmentally friendly printing options, and our building is both environmentally friendly and dog-friendly. In addition to creating a smoke-free campus with special humidification and natural lighting conditions, there is a trail system around the building with a waterfall and a pond, so employees can take their dogs for a walk or swim during the day. Our green activities have helped us create a positive workplace for our employees, excellent products and services for our customers, and a fun place for dogs to spend time with their owners."

-Andrew Field, president and CEO of PrintingForLess.com.

Andrew Field with Jessie

"We have a new organic bed—king-sized, of course, so there's plenty of room for two humans, two dogs and two cats. We also have a new hybrid car to get around in."

-Elaine Hendrix, actress
(What the Bleep, The Parent Trap)

Beth Shaw with Taj

"YogaFit and I have gone green with bamboo floors that the dogs love to lounge on, recycled bags to scoop poop, and homemade dog food in our green company kitchen (complete with energy-efficient lights, Energy Star appliances and denim insulation). We also wear sweaters in the winter to keep the heating bills low."

-Beth Shaw, founder and president of YogaFit

"Since my job involves making over people's homes every week, I try to find simple ways to bring in environmentally friendly elements to each makeover. I do it in a way that doesn't feel forced, but is part of the overall style and aesthetic—from shopping for vintage furnishings to using low-VOC paints. The small stuff adds up."

-Angelo Surrmelis, star of HGTV's Rate My Space

Angelo Surrmelis with Baxter

Elaine Hendrix with her dog, Tiloc, and cat, Goodie Cornbread